HONGKONG, JULY 15TH, 1911.

Progress in every direction is shown in the financial and economic statements for 1911 just published by the Japanese Department of Finance. The total value of the foreign trade of the country was the highest on record; the revenue for the year was over sixteen million pounds sterling in excess of the estimate; the conversion of the five per cent. loans to four per cent, at 204: in a big saving of interest; resulted it made money cheap and led to increased enterprise. The Department views with satisfaction the fact that he economic capacity of the country is yearly expanding, and the nation, by prudence and thrift, is husbanding its resources." These results Peak Church. have enabled the Government to readjust the heavy taxation imposed as a result of the war. The land tax and death duties, the business tax, sugar excise, textiles consumption tax and others have been so dealt with as to reduce the income from taxation by about fifteen million yen. But this saving is nearly counterbalanced by the salaries of Government officials and the allowances of non-commissioned officers and privates being increased by about 25 per cent. The salaries hitherto paid to officials in Japan have been notoriously nadequate, and though an increase of twenty-five per cent. seems large, no one familiar with the rates of official salaries in Japan will regard the increase as excessive, but rather as the minimum which could be offered to attract the class of men needed for official positions. The Report notes with satisfaction that though something like fifty million pounds sterling was invested in new enterprises during the year. there was an almost complete absence of such speculative enterprise as characterised the period immediately after the war. The feature of the Report of most general interest to our readers is that relating to foreign trade, which, as we have stated, reached record figures. It throws some light on the shipping statistics Hongkong for last year to be told that "the prosperous condition of the export and import trade of Japan last year resulted in an increase in the tonnage of steamers which entered and cleared from Japanese ports." Hongkong would be a port of call for most of this increased tonnage. While Japanese tonnage showed decrease of nearly half a million tons, British stoamers showed an increase of 121 vessels and 663,401 tons. British shipping represented 31 per cent. of the total tonnage of the year. Germany, the United States, in the order named. When we examine the nature of the exports and imports the significant fact appears that the increase in imports is not in manufactured goods, but is mainly in raw materials raw cotton and wool. As re gards the increase in exports, the compiler of the volume tells us that the principal causes would appear to be the fact that producers of raw silk, cotton varn and other articles have of late been able to reduce the cost of production by the use of cheap capital and improved methods of production, and so have been able to export their manufactures at low prices. More than one-third of the total imports last year was represented b raw cotton, and of this 63 per cent came from British India, 23 per cent from China, and 9 per cent. from the United States. Wool also showed an increase, and Japan relies almost entirely on the British Empire for this, 34 per cent. of the import coming from Great Britain and 55 per cent. from Australia. But in such goods as cotton yarns and cotton tissues cashmeres have also shown a tendency to gradual decline since their manufacture was commenced in Japan." The progress the country in the industrial arts is plainly apparent from the rapidly changing aspects of the foreign trade. Even the foreign machinery imports are declining, the nation relying more and more on native engineering establishments. We get this volume also an idea of the astonishing development of the country's mercanfile marine. Japanese toanage in seven years has been more than doubled. At the end of 1910 the registered gross tonnage of Japanese steamers was 1,224,091 and that of sailing ships 390,796, giving a total of 1,614,887. This development, as our readers are aware, has been promoted by navigation subsidies, and the building ships has been encouraged by bounties, with the result that there are in Japan at the present time no fewer than 230 private ship yards and 55 private docks. It is true that the majority of these are small, but it is also true that the numbers include some of the finest ship yards and most commodious docks in the East. Even when the burden of the war fell with crushing weight on the country there was no note of despair of pessimism sounded in the Financial and Economic Annual of Japan, and the confidence the Finance Department has consistently main-

THE FOREST FIRES IN CANADA

GREATEST DISASTER FOR HALF A CENTURY.

LONDON, July 14th.

A message from Ottawa states that the forest fires have extended to the new mining country in Northern Ontario. They are the greatest disaster which has overtaken Canada for half a century. An area of several hundred square miles has been swept by flames, which were fanned by a gale travelling at sixty miles an hour. Many miners sought refuge in shafts timbered with wood, only to be caught like rats in a trap. Crowds a Porcupine have sought shelter in the lakes, where they are standing in water up to their necks waiting for boats to rescue them. At least 200 people were benumbed and drowned, and a total death roll of 400 is not W. O. from G. Eng- regarded as excessive.

CANADIAN PREMIER'S APPRECIA-TION OF THE ROYAL FAMILY.

London, July 13th.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his return to Ottawa paid an eloquent tribute to the Royal Family, which he was convinced was the greatest asset of the whole Empire They had given the world an example of domestic virtues, which were the foundation of the happiness, prosperity and grandour of the nation. He exhorted the citizens to hasten improvements and make the capital worthy to receive Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. He was confident that the loyal affection of the people would make their stay in Canada a happy one. These sentiments were received. with enthusiastic cheering.

TYPHOON WARNING.

The American Consulate-General has received from Manila yesterday notification of the existence of a typhoon East of Northern Luzon, less than 300 miles distant, moving W.N.W. or N.W.

CHIEF ENGINEER FOR THE CANTON-HANKOW RAILWAY.

We learn from reliable sources that it has now been definitely decided that Mr. Collinson will be engaged as the Engineer-in-chief of the Hupeh and Hunan sections of the Canton-Hankow Railway, writes the Peking Daily News. His salary will be two thousand pounds a year plus three hundred taels a month for allowance. The draft contract of eagagement was settled on the 1st instant. It contains twelve articles. The Yuchusa Pu, we are informed, exercised unusual care in the proparation of the contract which is for three years. Attorney Allen was summoned to Paking from Tientsin by Lord Li Ching-fang to assist in the drawing up of the contract. Special precautions and safeguards were introduced to prevent waste or lavishness in expenditures. Those who have seen the terms of the contract express the opinion that it will be well nigh impossible to repeat the reckless expenditures of a certain railway. The contract will be signed the early part of this week. We hear that Mr. Collinson's staunch supporter is His Excellency Tuan Fing.

ME. E. A. LEGGATT QUESTIONED ON CHINA

Mr. E. A. Leggatt, acting superientendent of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company at Shanghai, China, arrived at Sydney on June loth by the E: and A. mail steamer St. Albans. Mr. Leggatt is on 12 months' furlough, after several years' service in the East. In the course of a conversation with an Evening News reporter, Mr. Leggatt is reported to have said: "Tiere is no doubt about the fact that Chins is waking up. She is on the alert now, and in every direction are signs of progress. You have heard, of course, about the cutting off of the pigtails. That became pretty general, and in some parts of China the operation was conducted in conjunction with a kind of religious ceremony." "How does China shape in the matter of telegraph services ? " "Oh! very well, indeed. The system is a big thing, and lately a big loan was raised for further development. "And is it run by Chinese officials?"-"Mainly. They are smart : cople, you know, and are keen upon advancing this particular institution." "Are there many telephones?"

"Not yet." "Do you know anything about the Sydney service? Can we learn anything from China?" "That is a matter upon which I cannot speak. I don't know anything about your

"Are you remaining long in Sydney?" "A f-w weeks."

"Well, then, you may have the opportunity of learning something about our 'phon-s. Questioned with regard to we eless installations, Mr. Leggatt said that when stations are erected at Hongkong and Sngapore, the East would be pretty well linked up. The Japanese coast was spleudidly equipped, and China had a station at Shan haf. This station had been erected by private enterprise. but the Chinese resumed it.

"Are there any advances in the Chinese "The authorities are certainly doing everything in the way of poviding for the training of officers. Special trips are made by ships along the coast to Nimrod Bay, where general training is carried out. The St. Albans passed several cruisers on this trip to Sydney. The ships were all manned by Chinese, and training was as thorough as could be expected." "How about the commercial training?" "Well that is not being overlooked, but in Shanghai just now things are flat. The rubber boom has burst, and numerous banks have failed. Then there were the plague riots, and, generally speaking, the place is not what it used to be." "But you seem to have great hopes as to the future of China?" "Everybody who knows anything about the Witness had paid $5 on account every month since he had borrowed the money. On the second note he received $34 in subsidiary coins, but had not paid anything, on account.

Mr. Shenton said the promissory notes were not absolute evidence in themselves that these menios were paid to the defendant.

His Lordship-It amounts to this: he received something for which he promised to pay the amounts stated on the notes.

Mr. Shenton - The defendant says this is such a neurious transaction that Court ought to lend its assistance to him.

His Lordship-Where is the authority for

Mr. Shonton referred his Lordship to the old Usury Ordinance, No. 5 of 1886, under which be submitted the defendant was entitled to relief.

His Lordship said he could not reduce the loan as shown in the promissory notes, and ordered the defendant to pay instalments of $15 a month, the first to be paid on August 2nd.

THE MONROE POLICY.

ENDORSEMENT BY SIR EDWARD GREY.

At the Pilgrims' dinner Sir Edward Grey Mr. Shenton-I admit the claim for the made a memorable statement when he definitely accepted the Monroe doctrine, or, as he rightly His Lordship-Is that admitted by the plain- preferred to call it, the Monroe policy. It may be said that Sir Edward Grey's statement is nothing new; that he only declared what everyone knows to be the universal feeling of Englishmen about the Monroe policy. That quite true, and yet no British statesman; we believe, has ever committed himself in such plain terms and without any caveats or limitations to an acceptance of the policy. That he should have done so is a proof I the unreserved confid nce between Great Britain and the United States. For the Monroe policy, be it remembered, though not a blank cheque, is a cheque of vague amount which can be increasadvanced $50. It was agreed verbally that ed to a very high figure. The policy has been gradually extended, and while foreign countries have raised no formal and categorical objection to these extensions the re-pect, and authority which the policy commands in the United States the essential and cardinal fact in the American treatment of foreign affairs, Every American feels that if he were not prepared to defend the Monroe policy to the uttermost he would be maintaining a foreign policy only on sufference. Only the other day we saw quite, unexpectedly an illustration of the profound . Weets of the Monroe policy. It seemed that Mexico was becoming more and more the prey of a chaotic civil war, and the question trembled in the balance whether the United States would have to intervene and send a large part of her army across the froutier. It was not an inviting prospect to invade the difficult mountainons country of Mexico and to face the possibility that American troops would be regarded as a common enomy by all Mexicans, both Federalists and insurgents. But the statesmon of Washing ton, although extremely anxious, did not sbrink from committing their fortunes to the adjudication of circumstances. Fortuestely a provisional settlement has been reached in Mexico, but if matters had drifted so far that some external authority had been required to protect the nationals of foreign countries there is not a doubt that American troops would have crossed the frontier. To allow a bad situation to get so far out of hand as to justify complaints from Europe and the threats of intervention would have been to forfeit the whole American claim to protector-> ship of the integrity of the American * outlinent We have never disguised the truth that the United States, in accepting this enormous responsibility, is maintaining a policy of extraordinary boldness and complexity. One is tempted sometimes to think that she does not appreciate the magnitude of the undertaking, or that, half appreciating it, she continually and deliberately puts all thoughts of it away in the manner of an incorrigible optimist. To keep order in Mexico alone, for example, would tax all her military resources. We hold, therefore, that the United States should develop a navul and military strength equal to her undertakings or would be wise to abandon or modify the Monroe policy. "The valour of ignorance," as General Homer Lea has called the American attitude in his well-known book, is apt to end in humiliation. Now, although we recognize that the development of considerable military strength and the abandonment of the Monroe policy are, in the present circumstances, and may always continue to be, the only practical alternatives, we have always frankly hoped that the United States would not abandon the Monroe policy. We believe that it is for the peace of the world that she should insist on it. things are, she can do this, as we have said, only by the strength of her arm. But if the present movement towards arbitration sacceeded there might be a wide change in the play of political forces, and such an outcome as the begun. It is, however, certain that they cannot maintenance of the Monroe policy by consent be much longer delayed, when no doubt might be possible. We sincerely hope that such a possibility may be kept in view. Six Edward Grey's definite recognition of the policy is a long step in that direction. In speaking of the proposed Arbitration Treaties between the United States and Great Britain and the United States and France, he said "They [the Americans] bave a policy associated with the name of Monroe, the cardinal point of which is that no European or non-American nation should acquire fresh territory on the Continent of America. If it be, as I think it must be, a postulate of any successful Arbitration Treaty of an extended kind that there should be no conflict, or possibility of conflict, between the national policies of the nations which .e parties to it. this condition is assumed as between us." Sir Edward Grey evidently thinks that a recognition of the Monroe doctrine would be involved in an Arbitration Treaty between France and the United States and ourselves. Such a recognition could not, perhaps, be included in the Arbitration Treaty itself but it could form the substance of a complementary understanding. The Monrie policy not international law, and consequently could not be assumed to be such by the lawvers of The Hague Tribunal; but if goodwill and the absence of all desires and motives for quarrel are as they obviously and necessarily ar—the basis of an Arbitration Treaty, the recognition of the Monroe policy would be perfectly easy for any nation which had reached the stage of arbitration with the United States. We have good hopes that France would admit this logic; her traditional friendship with the United States is the firm establishment of generations, and she has no wish nowadays to thrust a new Maximilian into Mexico. Her confidence in the United States is exceeded only by our own: for we take nothing but pride in the recollection that the Monroe policy was suggested flutter of apprehension, and it was that Canning proposed that the United States and Great Britain should declare their support of South American independence as against the Holy Alliance. Monroe, on receiving Canning's suggestion, wrote to Jefferson:— "Has not the epoch arriv'd when G. Britain must take her stand, either on the side of the menarchs of Europe, or of the United States.

Jefforson answered: "The question presented by the letters you have sent me is the most momentous which has ever been offered to my contemplation since that of independence that made us a nation; this sets our compass." When the policy was adopted by the United States it was made known (as Mr. T. A. Cook

pointed out in an article in the Fortnightly

Review of S-ptember, 1898, from which we have quoted the letters), not in Loudon, but Washington. Those, however, who remember the history of its origin will not be in any doubt that Great Britain has the best of all historical sanctions for recognizing it. We suggest that the United States, in her excellent attempt to establish Arbitration Treaties with different countries, should apply herself particularly to this separate yet counate point of procuring the recognition of the Mourae doctrine. She would be asked to define it precleely, no doubt. That would not be a disad vantage. No country which does not wish to disturb the states que would refuse recognition for merely perverse reasons. Only to put the question would be a kind of test of the peaceableness of the various Powers. - The Spectator.

Such increase can only be effected by a revision of the present tariff, which is the lowest tariff in force in any non-Free Trade country in the world. Revision is contemplated, but a revised tariff cannot take effect until it has been approved by all the Powers, and negotiations to that end have not even interests of our Indian tea merchants will be ad-quately safeguarded.

ADULTERATION OF COTTON

DISPATCH FRO 1 THE MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE AND COMMERCE.

The following translation is published the N. C. Daily News of the essential portions of a recent dispatch from the Ministry of Agriculture, Industry and Commerce to all the Industrial Taotais of the empire, prohibiting the adulteration of cotton:-

On the 28th day of the fourth moon of the 3rd year of Hsuan Tung (May 26, 1911) we received a petition from the Peiyarg (North) | well-known figures; and the women writers Merchants' Education Society, stating that in walking under their black and gold banner the North, among the products of the soil, cotton is one of the largest rades. THE SUFFRAGE PROCESSION FIVE MILES LONG.

REMARKABLE SCENE IN LONDON

Saturday, June 17th, was Suffrage Day in London. Never before has such a pageant passed through the streets of London as the procession in which 40,000 Suffragists marched between packed throngs of spectators from the Embankment to the Albert Hall to prove to doubting politicians that women are indeed in earnest for

It was an impressive demonstration, fitted to startle even the least observant. For in the ranks of that great army of women were old and young, women of every profession and occupation, doctors and teachers, hespital nurses, clerks and typists and business women; actresses, artists, and musicians, titled women of leisure, girl factory workers from the textile towns of the North, toiling sweated women from the East End; women, too, of every religious creed and of every political party.

The successful forming up of such a vast procession was in itself a magnificent tribute to the organising powers of the suffrage societies. The whole length of the Embankment from Blackfriars to New Scotland Yard was overfl wed into the rondways, there was no connons, and punctual to the minute at 5.30 the distributed between the various sections of the procession broke into a stirring march. "The March of the Women," specially written by Dr. Ethel Smyth, and the great pageant started on its way.

Right at the head rode Mrs. Drummond. followed by Miss Charlotte Marsh as banner bearer: and then, a very dignified figure, came Miss Annan Bryce, on horseback, as Joan of Arc. The leaders of the Women's Social and Political Union, Mrs. Pankhurst, Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, and Miss Christabel Pankhurst, had a cordial greeting from the crowd. It watched with interest the picturesque historical pageant which followed, though scarcely appreciating its true significance, as the representatives of the great women of an earlier day possed by in stately garb; the Abbess Hilda and her nuns; the Pearesses who were summoned to Parliament under Edward III.; the Free-women of the Corporations: and then, bringing the spectator back to modern times, representatives of all the States and Countries where women now have the franchise.

The Empire Pageant, too, drew cordial applause with its wonderful triumphal car drawn with long chains of roses by groups of girls all in white, and followed by contingents from all the different parts of the Empire, wearing national dress and carrying allegorical symbols. Not a few of the distinguished women from over the seas whom the Coronation has brought to this country walked in this group-Mrs. Fisher (wife of the Australian Premier), Mrs. McGowan (wife of the Prime Minister of New South Wales), Mrs. J. W. Sauer (South Africa); and many well-known women were also in the International group, in which nearly every civilised country was represented, proving the world-wide character of the women's movement, FAMOUS ACTRESSES TAKE PART.

On, on, the procession passed, a great white pageant, fleeked with brilliant colour, for the white frocks of the Suffragis's set off the varied ritbons and badges they wore, while the fluttering pennants they carried produced a kaleidoscopic effect of moving, swiftly-changing, varied

All in white were the 700 prisoners, fair and young most of them, to the evident astonishment of some members of the crowd, who seemed to imagine that persons who have "done time" must bear an unmistakably oriminal appearance. Then came the pretty blue and gold colours of the Conservative suffragists, and a very strong body they were, with Lady Betty Balfour and many other well-known women among them; the actresses medeanother charming lody of demonstrators, and showed beyond a doubt, as they walked along under arches of rambler roses and carrying dainty bouquets of DRESSING CASES with Coronations, that a woman can keep her charm and and yet want a vote.

There were many familiar faces in this group, Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss Decima Moore, Miss Yvotte Guilbert, and Miss Gurtrade Kingston, while Princess Bariatinsky was also among the processionists, and rode on horseback Among the musicians were Dr. Ethel Smyth in her scarlet robes, Miss Esther Palliser, and other included such distinguished authors as E'izabeth Robins. Beatrice Harraden, Cicely Hamilton, Sarah Grand, and Alice Meynell. The familiar gold and green of the Women's Freedom League made a very brave show, and everyone had a respectful greeting for Mr Despard; the Church League was headed by group of clergy in their academic robes; and the Free Church League and the Catholic women though very youthful societies, proved to be already strong in numbers.

Five years ago the leaders of the Votes for Women movement set out to raise £10 .000 for the prosecution of their campaign, and on Saturday this ambition was realised. Previous to the demonstration the fund stood at £99.500. and before the Albert Hail meeting anded the suffragists had a "war chest" of £103,000.

Mrs. Pethick Lawrence said that the suffrage organisations have now entered upon a scheme to raise a quarter of a million for the purpose of further advancing their cause. - Daily Chronicle.

Pneumonia and Pleurisy After Effects, Wasting and Weakness—

Happy and cheerful with abundance of energy and good spirits, is how Miss Dunford describes herself from the day she commenced to take Phosferine. Yet before she found relief in Phosferine words failed to express the miserable torments she endured from the effects of pneumonia and pleurisy, the aches, sleeplessness, neuralgia, and wasting, which even doctors failed to remedy. No wonder Miss Dunford feels (after two years of such suffering without ease or rest for the body) that Phosferine "has given her a new and better lease of life," for she declares it is entirely owing to Phosferine that she is actively busy again. Every overwrought wage-earning woman will find a message of hope in Miss Dunford's experience, with its splendid assurance of renewed nervous vitality, and absolute prevention of tissue wasting.

Completely Overcome.

Miss Daisy Dunford, High Street, Shrewton, Wilts, writes: - "I have found Phosserine to be a wonderful remedy. Some two years ago I had pneumonia and pleurisy, which left me with terrible pains in my back and legs. Two doctors prescribed for me, but gave me not the slightest relief. I could not sit, lie down, or sleep, on account of the incessant agony, and I became so exceedingly weak and wasted that my friends were seriously alarmed. My appetite failed, and the little food I ate caused indigestion; my life was nothing but a prolonged torture. The doctors said it was a form of neuralgia and sciatica, but the words do not convey any idea of my fearful state. I thought I would give Phosferine a trial, which. I did, and after taking it for a little while, the pains were not nearly so acute, and finally left me altogether. I regained flesh, felt stronger, the indigestion entirely disappeared, and now, thanks to its marvellous aid, my health and strength, is completely restored. I cannot put into words my gratitude for the good Phosferine has done me, for I feel it has given me a new and better lease of life."

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

THE CENTURY'S STEAM MOTOR. progress, the Hon. C. A. Parsons notes that the simple de Laval turbine of 1888 was a steel paddle wheel driven by a trumpt-shaped jet of steam at a speed limited only by the strength of the materials. Mr. Parsons early decided but the first compound steam turbine ran at | well marked stratum of the air. 18,000 revolutions a minute. An efficiency of about 75 per cent, has been gradually reached duce the speed to that of a steamship's screw, compressed into moulds or otherwise shaped but the helical-tooth reducing genr of Dr. de and dried 2 or 3 days. The product burn, Laval has worked admirably, and in a cargo without odour or smoke, leaving 8 to 16 per cent, boat of 1908, a high and a low pressure turbine of ash. each drive a pinion at 1,400 revolutions, gearing into a main wheel on the screw shaft making 70 revolutions per minute. In the new combination system, the high pressure steam is used for reciprocating engines and turned over at a lower pressure to the turbines, this plan, having given a coal-saving of 14 per cent. on the 20,000 ton Laurentic. Marine turbines of more

It was so transparent that it could be seen through from end to end, and was free from impurities, though crossed by a number of fractures. The finder

McKendrick, an English experimenter, has damped down the friction noises of a gramophone by passing the sounds through at out 54 feet of 12-inch tin tube partly filled with peas. The musical notes were much more natural.

AN IMPROVED LAMP.

Themerenry vapour lamp of Maurice, of Paris, uses a tube of quartz instead of glass, so that it can be operated at a higher temperature; and the result is a more agreeable yellowish light, with a reduction in the electric current necessary. The new lamp is claimed to be the most economical of any in running expense, though its first cost is high. Numerous difficulties have been encountered, and to obtain an electrode of small expansion it has been necessary to use "invar" alloy made tight with a mercury seal, to prevent distillation of mercury to the negative electrodo the tube has been given a special shape, and to avoid overheating the ends of the tubes have been fitted with copper cooling wings to radiate away the heat excess. The power consumed is comparable to that used by the flaming are lamp. The quartz lamp, however, runs 1,000 hours without attention, uses no carbons and needs no cleaning of the globe, is free from vibration from mechanical regulation, and gives a more perfect diffusion. The ultra-violet rays that are given off in dangerous abundance are entirely out off by the use of a glass globe.

RUBBER FROM TAR. Artificial rubber may be produced by treating tar with a ferment from natural caoutchone, according to a recent English patent. The GOOD ENGLISH GUNS. genuine rubber is heated with an animal or vegetable oil from 110 degrees to 120 degrees F., water is added, and the ferment scon separates at the line of junction. Thinning the tar with a solvent and shaking up with acetic acid removes the ammonia. The material so purified is placed in a shallow dish in an oven heated to 120 deg., the ferment is spread on the surface, a current of oxygen is passed, and after a time the tar changes and becomes viscous. The new rubber is then separated by precipitation or by distillation of the light oil.

TAKING RADIUM THEOUGH THE SEIN. Several French experimenters have attempted to administer radium through the unbroken skin by electrolytic action. It was found that the substance could be thus applied to any part of the body direct, and radium was afterwards detected in the skin, the muscular tissue and the bones. The process was pronounced safe and reliable.

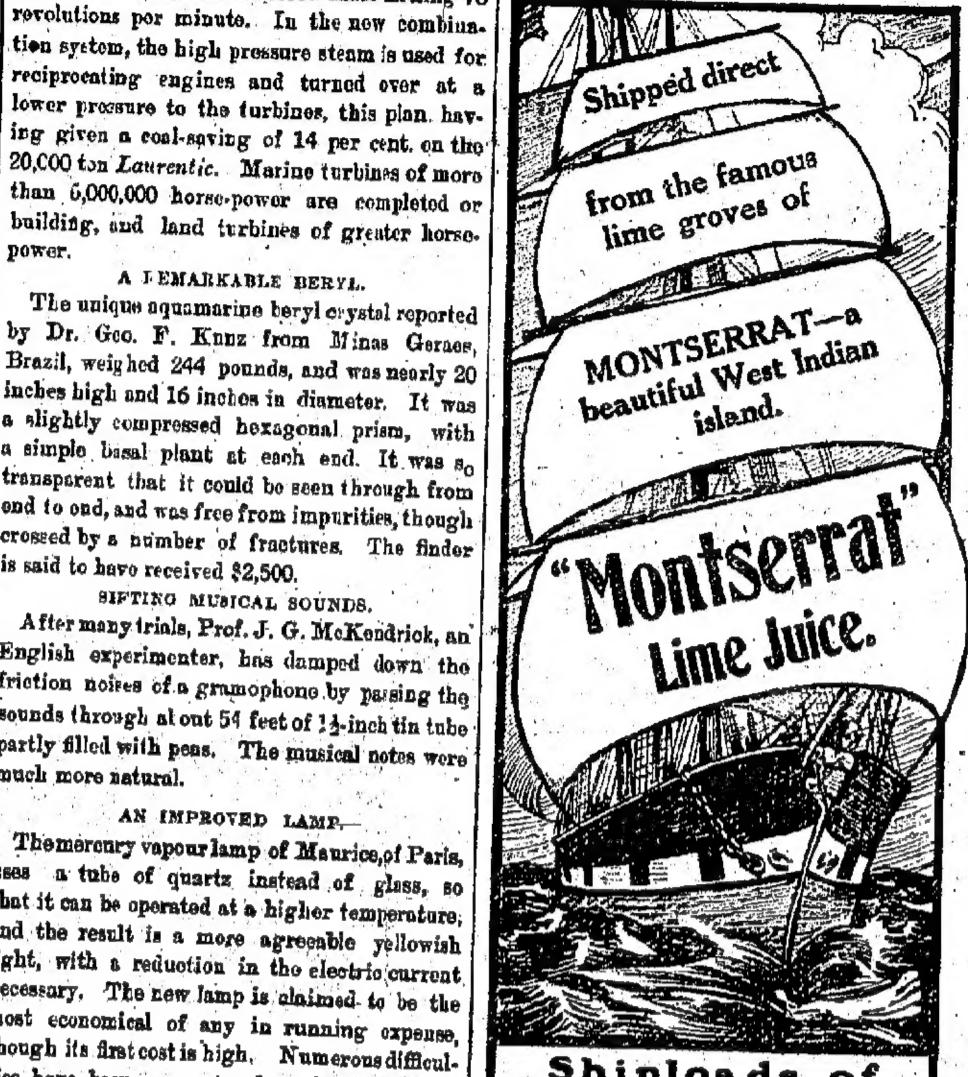

NEW REPRIGERATION.

The new chemical refrigeration of Dr. Repin, a French chemist, is claimed to be free from the defects of the ammonia process, and to be especially adapted for economical results in small plant. In the ordinary refrigeration, the cooling is effected by the evaporation of liquefied ammonia. The ammonia gas is recovered in water, which absorbs great volumes, and when the solution so formed is heated the ammonia is expelled into a cooled receiver and liquefied by its own pressure. A serious difficulty is that about 25 per cent, of water is carried with the ammonia from the solution. The new process, free from this trouble, uses sulphur dioxide as a refrigerant and campher as an absorbent, 20 per cent. of naphtol being added to the latter to prevent excessive foaming and melting of the camphor on heating. The sulphur dioxide is easily liquefied and absorbs much heat in evaporating, while it is entirely disengaged in gaseous form from the camphor solution at a temperature below the boiling point of water. THE AIR'S STRATA.

The atmosphere has a number of well-defined strata, according to the novel theory of Dr. Alfred Wegener-the lowest being chiefly nitrogen, a second consisting of hydrogen, and third being mostly "geocoronium," a very light hypothetical element that he believes is indicated by a line of the nurors spectrum bitherto attributed to krypton. Reviewing the ateam turbine's remarkable The colculation is made that at a height of about 300 miles 93 per cent. of the atmosphere is this gas, the remainder being hydrogen. The stratification may account for some anomalies of sound, as, for instance, the audibility of certain explosions at about 60 miles after they that the speed must be reduced by compounding, have ceased to be heard at 20 miles, the distant using the falling steam pressure in several steps, sound being explainable as a reflection from a BREATH.

THE TONGUE IS THE INDEX.

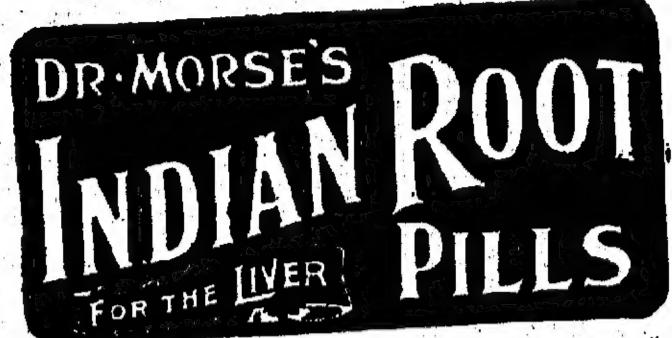

You do not perceive it yourself. You are like a person who is always among the oils and varnishes-you get used to what is to many people a most obnoxious smell. It is most disagreeable those with whom you come in contact. A slight Headache, a Bad Breath, and a Coated Tongue, are the first symptoms of Stomachic Disease. Take time by the forelock and intercept its germination; arrest the germs ere they develop into disease. A pill in time may save days of suffering. Look at your tongue in the looking glass every night and morning, and if it is at all discoloured, take a couple of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. They will remove the objectionable matter from the stomach, regulate the system, and sweeten the breath. One or two of these pills taken once or twice a week will ensure a well-regulated system, fortified against all disease.

They are a perfect Blood Purifier and a positive and permanent cure for Billousness, Indigestion, Constipution, Headaches, Sallow Complexion, Liver and Dimples, Boils Blotches, and for Pemale Allments.

CHAPTER XV.

Although Mrs. Jennings had given Lizzie Polperne to understand that her life in London was to be one round of visits and amusements, it was, in reality, a very quiet one. She did indeed make occasional pilgrimages to the various churches and buildings. Her favourite walk was to St. Paul's Cathedral. The massive edifice exercised some strange, subtle fascination over her. She was especially attracted by the monuments of heroes dead and gone, and would spend some hours poring over the epitaphs engraved upon their tembs. One evening, after leaving the Cathedral, she walked to Westminster by way of the Embankment, taking a cursory glance at the electric trams, which she compared unfavourably with the Penzance motor brakes. The grey old Abbey itself failed to weave its potent spell upon her, it was the tombs in which her heart delighted.

"I declare, mother," remarked her son, "you have got death and burials upon the brain. Why don't you go and see something a bit more lively than a lot of graves P"

Then Mrs. Jennings remembered Lizzie Polperne's words, and corlosity drew her towards Madame Tussaud's and the Chamber of Horrors. Here her morbid tendencies had fuller

The hangman's rope, the guillotine, the waxen necks on which were sprinkled drops of blood -upon all these her eyes feasted with a persistence she tried in vain to curb. Twice she attempted to leave the Chamber; twice those ghastly heads and crime-stained trophies seemed to call her back. At last she made a final effort, and returned to the region of smiling royalties and benign statesmen. But that night she swoke screaming in her sleep, only pacified by her son's appearance at her bed-side, assuring her that her terror existed only in a

"Look here, mother, we can't have this style of thing," he told her next morning. "London does not suit you; the noise and bustle evidently gets on your nerves. Goodness knows why you left Sennen. I think you had better go back there as soon as possible."

"I'm not going back to Sennen, Bill, so it's no use talking," she said, with the return of her old spirit. "Well, it would not suit my books to have you here for ever. Still I'm in no hurry, say, for a week or so." Mr. Jennings' lip trembled.

"I never thought you would turn me out of the house, Bill, after all I have done for you," and she choked back a sob. Her love for her son was the roling passion of her life. "There, there," he said, not unkindly, laying heavy hand upon her shoulder, "Don't take on like that. You are not well, and what with your tombs and nightmares I believe you are getting on my nerves too. If you don't want to go back to Senuen, how would you like a job in London? It strikes me you would be happier with something more to do than wander about

The offices occupied part of a block of buildings in a small back street leading out of one of the main thoroughfares of Holborn. One morning, as she was superintending the sweeping of the passage, the outer door was swung to hastily and a man made his appearance. Something in his step arrested her attention. "Why!" she exclaimed, sloud, "I declare if it's not Mr. James Tregonning!" Hearing his name, the newcomer paused, and turning his head met the housekeeper's surpris-

"As good as Herpicide" is the familiar claim that is made for many so called germ-destroying hair remedies. Newbro's Herpicide is the ORIGINAL remedy that kills the dandruff germ, and its wonderful success and popularity account for the increasing number of imitations of it. Why not got the Original?

Substitutes are always disappointing. Herpicide kills the germ that causes dandruff, itching. Scalp and falling hair. Extraordinary results follow its use stops itching of scalp instantly.

Mrs. Jennings next venture met with no more success. Here the occupant was pleased to be facetious. She was a small and shrivelled woman, with a smile which revealed one prominent tooth amid a row of irregular gaps. "My!" she said. "Here's a rum go! Liza, come 'ere. "She came down our court one day, she 'ad at wiv violets in it and there was a ansom tion awaiting for 'er at the top. Come, Lizz, if you can't answer the lydy after all these particulars, I'm downright ashamed of ye." Mrs. Jennings was becoming weary of these

"I am sorry to have troubled you," she said, stiffly, fixing her eye upon the largest rent in Liza's skirt. " Good morning."

"Lor! There aint no call to be huffy," said Lisa. "I'll keep my eye on all the lydies with violets ablowing and agrowing on their ats, and I'll send you their addresses straight off." But Mrs. Jennings had gone.

"I'll have one more try," she said, "and only one. And if that is no good Tregonning may keep his balf-sovereigns and my fine lady her hiding place. In not going to be made a fool of either to please him or to spite her."

However, her third attempt met with more success. Here a meak little woman in rusty black and a crimson shawl fastened with a large brooch containing twisted hair, made her appearance. She was a superior type to the others and dropped her visitor a respectful

"Good day, ma'am," she said. "If you have come about any charring I'm very willing to "Thank you," replied Mrs Jennings, propi-tisted by the curtsey. "But I don't want any charring. The woman's face fel!.

"I'd have been real glad of a job. What with four children and my husband laid up with a broken leg I never did think I should be brought to such a pass with no one but Providence to help me." Whether it was the broken leg or the four children or the sole assistance of Providence to which she referred was not quite clear, but she gave a little sniff which suggested that in each of the items she found a grievance.

"I have called to enquire," went on Mrs. Jennings, " if you can give me any information about a young lady who was in this street some time ago." As she repeated her description of 'arri-t Tremayne she was relieved to see a light break over the other's gloomy countenance. "Yes, I remember her, she came to see the lady next door. Yes, I was cleaning my windows when she came up the court and goes in next door. 'Oh! Mrs. Lee has got a visitor, says I, and I watched to see how long she stayed, and a long time it was, too, Mrs. Lee, she moved away from here about a week after the young woman with the violets called; I remember it because it was the day I paid my rent."

"Where has she gone too, do you know?" "I sint quite sure, she went off sudden like, elling nobody; not even me who was her best friend, often giving her a nice bone with the pickings on it. She came in one morning. She came in and asked my husband if he could take the baby's cradle in his cart as far as he was going. She set great store by the cradle."

Mrs. Jennings pricked up her ears. "Where did your husband take the cradle?" "He took it to Mitcham. He has a barrow with plants and flowers and he gets his stock there. He took the cradle on to Mitcham Junction, Mrs. Lee saying she would call at the station for it later in the day. He's a kind hearted man is my husband, always ready to do a good turn."

Having given the woman the present of a shilling, Mrs. Jennings made her way to the Station, which lay in the middle of the wide. breezy Common. The truffic was not great enough to prevent the porter recalling the incident of the cradle.

Yes, he remembered it right enough; a great cumbersome thing, the same as he had seen in his grandmother's picture books.

They had joked about it, and he had saked her if she wanted a porter to carry it for her, but she said she had not far to go. Oh, yes, he could show the lady the house, it was just by where he himself lodged. He directed Mrs. Jennings; and in a few minutes she found herself in a row of country-looking cottages.

The porter had not been quite sure of the piece of gold in her hand, and her face twisted name or number of the house; it had a little stonework rockery by the gate, he said, and "Humph!" she said. "I wonder what he wants | while she was looking for this distinctive feature, with Harriet Tremayne? EUROPEAN ENGINEERS IN SOUTH CHINA In the course of a trade review of South

China prepared by the American Vice-Consulat Canton it is stated that the introduction of modern factories, mills, plants, etc., affords a considerable opening in this district, as elsewhere in China, for foreign mechanical engineers, both in installing and operating the machinery. These positions, however, are not ones which can be bid for on the open market, but go as a rule with a contract for machinery. The concern which supplies the machinery sends out a man to install it and, if necessary, operate it. Practically spauling it would be harders. share £1. Calls psid up are:out a man to install it and, if necessary, operate it. Practically speaking it would be hopeless for an American engineer to attempt to secure a position in any such plant unless through the firm which sends out the machinery or unless he has been in China and had definite connection with the Chinese or other proprietors. Little American machinery has so far been sold in this district, and consequently Americans have not figured largely among the foreign mechanical engineers employed. American locomotives have been purchased for some of the railways and have been assembled by American engineers. The openings for by American engineers. The openings for American chemists or assayers are equally limited. Many of the Chinese cement and steel Manche, surveying-ship, 1,625 tons, 10 guns, 900 h.p., Commander Ragot de la Touche, Saigon

Commander de la Roche Kerandraov, either in construction, operation, or management and steel works employ foreign experts, but none of the men employed in this capacity in this district are Americans. The policy of the Chinese is not to employ foreigners on their railways, either in construction, operation, or management when their work can be done by Chinese. Pelho, river gunboat, 190 tons, 4 guns, 280 h.p. more young Chinese engineers the disappearance of foreign engineers from all the railways not controlled by foreign interests is assured at an early date. American engineers have been employed in the past to some extent in surveying for and constructing railways in this district, and a few Americans are still so employed, but they are rapidly disappearing, and it is improbable that any more will be employed. In the future American railway engineers will secure appointments on Chinese railways solely in the case of lines controlled by American none in China, and such appointments will have to be secured through the capitalists in America and not in China. In the same way the Chinese prefer to employ native mining engineers, when the same are available, in all native mining enterprises. The mines in this Consular district have not been extensively developed; and it is probable that by the time the Chinese are prepared to work their mines on a large scale there will be a sufficient number of foreign-trained Chinese mining engineers to fill all the positions thereby created.

> PATTI AT THE ALBERT HALL. MMB. TETRAZZINI'S WELCOME.

It was wonderful, writes a correspondent, to hear Mme. Patti's singing on June 1st at the Albert Hall. Difficult indeed is it to believe that it is actually over fifty yearssince she made her debut at Covent Garden in "Ls Sonnambula." This is just exactly where a perfect style of singing tells, for the voice itself may lose its compass and power, and even some of its quality of tone, but the lapse of years is u nable to destroy the sense of phrasing, that artistic poise of colour and those subtle shades of dynamic expression which more and more one fears are being forgotten or ignored in these days of hastily-acquired technique. It was a remarkable event, and small wonder that the reception accorded to the great singer should have been of the warmest possible kind, and that, taking one thing with another, the occasion, the benefit concert to a friend of many years' standing, unfortunately debarred as the result of an accident from following his profession, she should have been unable to refrain from showing her emotion. To the songe down in the programme, "Voi che sapete" from "Figaro," and Tosti's "Serenata," encores had, of course, to be added. The closing one was 'Home, Sweet Home." Not the least notable feature of Mm e. Patti's reception was the warm embrace she received from Mme. Tetrazzini, who rushed on to the platform from her seat in the auditorium with characteristic impulse.

PREACHER'S SECRET

"I have lived long enough," says an eminent clergyman, "to learn that the secret of happiness is never to allow one's energies to stagnate. It's easy talking, but we have to allow some things to happen, whether we will or not.

When a man hasn't a morsel to est, and can't get food anywhere, he is obliged to "allow" himself to go hungry. And "energies" come from something—they depend on something. When that something fails, then the energies stagnate, in spite of all the talk in the world. Just listen to Mr. Francis, who lives at 287, Umgeni Road, Durban, Speaking of his own experience, he says: "I often went to work in the morning feeling so tired and used up that often felt inclined to give in. In other words, his energies were stagnatedthing the preacher says ought never to be allowed to happen! Why did it happen? Let Mr. Francis himself explain. "I suffered severely from indigestion. My heart palpitated so much that I felt every best. My sleep was WARLIKE EXPLOITS OF THE broken. My appetite was so poor that I was scarcely able to touch food. I became thin and things altogether, I was in a bad way. In spite of medicines, I got no better.' We venture to say that the preacher never had indigestion like that man had it, or he would never have talked so glibly about not letting one's energies stagnate, whether they will or not. All they can do is what Mr. Francis did-get rid of indigestion-and then their energies will stagnate no longer. Mr. Francis' letter tell us how he was cured. He writes: "I took eight bottles of Mother Seigel's Syrup, and I have been in the best of health ever since."

That is testimony enough to the curative powers of Mother Seigel's Syrup, for it has not only restored Mr. Francis to health, but it has kept his digestive system in thorough working order! If you wanted further proof of the value of Mother Seigel's Syrup as a family remedy, here it is, in Mr. Francis' own words: "I have used the Syrup for my wife and children with equally good results, for Mother Seigel's Syrup is an excellent household remedy." People who lack energy, feel tired, languid, feeble, nervous, need one thing to make them strong, bright, vigorous and comfortable again. viz., food. Food will do it, when everything else has failed. After it is digested it will do PLAN OF VICTORIA it—not before. When your stomach is deranged and cannot digest food, Mother Seigel's Syrup. the herbal tonic, will tone up and help it to do its work. For 40 years past, Mother Seigel's Syrup has brought energy, health and happiness to thousands of tired, dyspeptic men and women just as it will bring these blessings to you! As a digestive tonic and stomachic remedy, Mother Seigel's Syrup is unrivalled. Try it to-day, and prove its worth!

REVIEWS.

The Escape Agents. By D. J. CUTCLIPPI HYNE. London: T. Werner Laurie.

The keynote to the motif of these sketches is struck in an adventure of the immortal Captain Kettle, who makes a journey to Algeria to aid in the escape of a German baron from Foreign Legion. But the main parrative deals with a Major Joseph Colt and a certain Mademoiselle Clarice. The Major is a quaint, if adventurous, American, who has enlisted in Napoleon's army in order to win fame and a marshal's baton and to supply Boston schoolmarm with first-hand subjectmatter for a book on "The Conduct of the Continental War." Mademoiselle Clarice is a whilem actress, hissed from the stage by the Emperor, and now a vivandière to one of his regiments. Both are attached to an unfortunate brigade which capitulates to the Spaniards and is sent to the galleys. Both become the escape agents, and their doings provide Cutcliffe Hyno with an opportunity for bold romance. There are so many anachronisms that one cannot help feeling that the author is poking fun at his reader. It is an extravagansa large and bold, fascinating in its exaggerated exploits, and it ends in such a way as to give us hope of "further adventures" of Major Colt and Mile. Clarice. The author has resorted to a quaint arrangement of his stories. Between each chapter of "The Escape Agents" there is inserted a separate little tale which has H. W. C. Davis, a distinguished Oxford scholar, nothing whatever to do with the chapter that precedes or the one that follows. The best of the lot is probably." Elixir Vitee," but there is a touch of W. W. Jacob in "The Race," a story of two shippers and their owner.

The Girl from the March Croft. By SELMA LAGERLOF, author of "The Story of Gösta Berling" and holder of the Nobel Literary Prize. London: T. Werner Laurie.

There is an undercurrent of plaintive melancholy running through these nine stories which. we in Eaglish Colonies have come to regard as | and students Mr. J. A. Hobson's "Science of inseparable from the Scandanavian character. An exception should be made, perhaps, in the case of the last. It is obviously a chapter of autobiography, and shows how "The Story of Gösta Berling" was written. In this collection, the writer has abandoned the realm of pure romance for naturalism and realism. and as one follows the tribulations of the Girl from the Marsh Croft one seems to be looking on at a little drame in real life, with all the pathos and humour which gives the light and shadow to an actual existence. It is the longest as well as the best of the series, and shows that the gifted authoress has in her the germs of genius, the faculty to observe blended with the art to reveal the inner workings of human nature. "The Airship" is very pathetic. Here we are face to face with real tragedy, tragedy, moreover, that is not, we fear, uncommon real life, where frustrated ambition has led genius along the downward path to destruction substitutes. Remember, the remedy with the involving the lives of others. There is true insight into character in "The Silver Mine," with its old-world atmosphere; quaintness in "The Legend of the Christmas Rose;" humour in "Why the Pope lived to be so old." We are accustomed to the sameness of the majority of our English writers that we welcome this work from the pen of the distinguished Swedish novelist. It is translated into English Velma Swanston Howard, who makes us feel that she has retained somewhat of the original > Photography-for-Bird Lovers, By-BENTLEY BEETHAM, F.Z.S. London: Witherby & Co. As its title indicates this is a practical guide to the parsuit of bird photography in all its branches. The author, who is a well-known and successful exponent of the art, gives ungradgingly from his store of knowledge gained by his own personal experience in the field, and writes in such a charming manner that readers interested in the pursuit will feel impelled to act on the many useful suggestions furnished. Bird photography, as Mr. Beetham points out, is not an old hobby served up in a new guise. It is something entirely new, and only rendered possible by late advancements in the photographic art. It represents an instrustive, a healthful, and a valuable pursuit, and bound to attract adherents from the numerous ranks of nature lovers. The book, it should be added, is enhanced by many beautiful photo.

Home University Library. Second set of ten 6d. Loudon : Williams & Norgate. (The Davis, M. . Mohammedanism, by Prof. D. S. J. A. Hobson, M.A. Health and Disease, by | Shepardson, Army Navy Club, Kobe Oliver Lodge, F.R.S. Evolution, by Prof. J. A. Thomson and Prof. P. Geddes. Liberalism, by Prof. L. T. Hobbonse, M.A. Crime and Insanity, by Dr. C. A. Mercier.)

These ten well-printed and handsomely bound clumes will confirm and, indeed, increase, the favourable impression made by the first issue of the Home University Library, in many ways the most remarkable literary venture of recent years. We heartily congratulate the publishers not only upon the high quality of these booksthat was to be expected of a group of writers of such unquestionable authority -but also upon the the interesting manner in which each of them presents his subject. The authors are all acknowledged experts of the first class, and several of them are widely known; but it is probable that none of them has ever before been called upon to address so large a popular audience as the success of the Home University Library assures them. Thus challenged, they have cast off their academic THE enthusiasm-addressed themselves simply and directly to the general reader. It is this combination of learning and meet to convey it to the masses of the people, together with the comprehensive design of the series, that distinguishes the Library from so many arid treatises and primers. We note with special pleasure the very useful "Notes on Books" accompanying each volume, which double their value to the student Sir Harry Johnston-who has served the State in many capacities, civil and military, in what, not so long ago, deserved to be called the "Dark Continent," and is, besides, an eminent zoologist and anthropologist-describes "The Opening-up of Africa" from prehistoric times to the present day. The earlier portraces of the ancient Egyptian, Greek, and -Roman civilisation on African soil, are certainly not the least interesting in this notable volume and some of the author's views are likely to give rise to much discussion among those interested in the origin of races, white and coloured. Justice is done to the heroes of exploration and the pioneers of trade-Portuguese, Dutch, French. British, German, and others; and incidentally the author deals faithfully with the late King

It is a part of the scheme of the Home University Library to present a series of vivid sketches of great periods which, when they are completed, will form a brief conspectus of universal history. In the first set of volumes, Mr. Hilaire Beilee dealt with the French Revolution. Mr. now gives us a bird's eye view of "Medieval

The Professor of Arabic at Oxford devotes the third of these little books to an account of life and faith of the one-sixth or one-seventh of the human race who call themselves after Mohammed, prophet and dry-goods merchant. They are estimated at 233 millions, more than a half of these being Asiatics and more than a usrter Africans.

Political economy is more difficult and more debatable ground, especially in a time of transition, when so many of the doctrines of the classical school are challenged from difficult points of view. But from all types of teachers Wealth" must command respectful consideration, because it is the ripe fruit of many years' work by one of our most powerful and fair-minded thinkers. The author analyses the structure and working of the moderate business world, describing the parts played by labour, ability, land, capital and society, working out an original theory of an "unproductive surplus" of wealth with special reference to trade crises, and finally discussing the Labour Movement and State Socialism, foreign trade, and "human values." Whether his detailed conclusions be justified or not. Mr. Hobson expresses the conscience of the time in seeking for a higher hermony of industrial life; and it is more than possible that his latest book may establish itself as the "Jevons" or "Fawcett" of the next generation.

"Changing order, orderly change, and this everywhere in nature inorganic and organic, in individual and in social life." Such is the vast subject of the volume in which two of the most brilliant living ricottish thinkers-Professor J. A. Thomson (the Science Editor of the Library) and Professor Patrick (Jeddescollaborate. This sketch of the evidences and meaning of "Evolution" is no dull primer, but s many-coloured and romantic panorama, opening up, like no other book we know, "a rational vision of world-development." The earlier chapters give a running summary of the testimony of explorers and geologists, anatomists, embryologists, and physiologists. Then the "Great Steps in Evolution" are recapitulated, and the facts of variation and heredity, selection, function, and environment stated. Finally, the chief evolution theories are summarised, and the authors' adventure upon a "reinterpretation" which will be scanned with immense interest by those who know their previous work upon the subject. Two notes of the time ring through this entrancing volume: the one is the necessity of combining field observation and indoor study and interpretation, and the welcome extended to the humblest students into this double work; the other is the close association of biol-gical and social ideas and studies. We shall be very much surprised if in due time this book does not top the list of successes of the Home University Library. Lord Hugh Ceril's "Conservatism" being unavoidably postponed, contemporary political thought is represented by Professor L. T. Hobhouse's "Liberalisn." Considering the political genius of the British people, and Mr the need of political education for the M. efficient working of the State, it is curious that there should be an actual dearth of reasoned statements of the doctrines of our great parties. Dr. Charles Mercier, the eminent specialist, Mr undertakes to tell the general reader what crime " De is, why certain acts, even if they harm nobody, Mr are regarded as orimes; what insanity is, how it | Mr contributes to various kinds of crime, and how the criminal law stands in need of amendment. Mr The subject is one of wide and painful importance, and if Dr. Mercier's views are sometimes of disturbing originality, that fact adds to the natural interest of his book.
